Probably not quite the diversity of Penns, which has I don't know how many hundred species of mayflies. But yeah, the big hatches were probably similar. I'd expect it had very strong MB and GD hatches to add the sulfurs, BWO's, and tricos of today. Not sure if it was ever strong in the grannoms, stones, slate drakes, and the like, but I don't know that it wasn't either.
