

Subject: : Fly Tying

Topic: : insect ID

Re: insect ID

Author: : JackM

Date: : 2007/8/20 20:31:34

URL:

I just guessed cahill because that's what I call the size 14 yellow/orange flies that have been coming off the Yough and I think they are 2-tailed. I thought I read once that the term "cahill" refers to a fly pattern, not a bug species per se. The term may be applied in one location to one species and in another to a different species altogether.

I propose that yellowish bugs go the way of the BWO. Call them all sulfurs and then we can say that creamy sulfurs came off last night or the orange sulfurs were hatching early or the blue-winged sulfurs are getting underway, or that the pale sulfurs are almost over below the bridge.