If you're out there taking a sampling of temps at various hours to get an idea of high and low water temps over the period of a few weeks, be my guest. I don't think one can ever assume that this is the case.

I'll maintain that it's irresponsible to fish streams over the 70-72 mark, for most situations. My interpretation of the original questions was that general information was requested. I'll also propose that it's irresponsible to suggest that a beginner fish streams over that range, unless they're willing to do the temperature study mentioned above.
