I stand by my position that your statement in reply #10 is way overbroad. You do not have to do a temperature study, just use common sense. If the last 5 days were air temps in the high 80s and the 9:00 AM temperature is 70, then you know full well that the stream was too warm a good portion of the day before. On the other hand, if the temperature at 5:30 PM on the fifth extremely hot day is 70, I wouldn't hesitate to fish the stream, morning noon or night. I think it is irresponsible to give inaccurate or incomplete information in response to an inquiry.
