Although I have been flyfishing for Smallmouth Bass for years, I consider myself a novice in this area of the sport. My success has been largely limited to catching smaller fish by throwing wooly buggers and crayfish patterns in riffles and runs. It seems that many of the larger fish inhabit the long, deep, slow running holes in the rivers that I fish. My success in this type of water, for the larger fish has not been too good. Can you offer suggestions based on your experience, on how to fish this type of water for the larger fish that are found there?
