I've fished numerous destination-type trout waters up and down the East from the Tuck and Nantahala in North Carolina, the Beamoc and Upper D systems in NY, West Branch Ausable and other Adirondack rivers also in NY, as well as the incredible Upper Connecticut River in New Hampshire and the Lehigh is pretty darned close to most of them and improving.

If that is even remotely true then the Lehigh is definitely getting a bad rap. I grew up fishing Tuck and Nantahala and would love to get that kind of quality fishing locally. I mean I am a master at dodging the tubers and rafters on the Nantahala, so I should be golden on the Lehigh. I am going to NC for a week or two to fish the NC/TN rivers. When I get back I will allow you to take me out and prove the Lehigh. LOL.
