Many thanks to all of you for the helpful tips and good information - you guys got me pumped about fishing the salt with fly tackle! Salt water fishing is not new to me, just never used a fly rod. I do enjoy a new challenge and a change of pace and it sounds like this venture will provide both.

Gfen- I will take your advice, strip off the 6 wt line, buy an 8 wt line and install it on the reel and fish my never used 8 wt rod. I may have to take some backing off the reel to make room for the heavier line though. If I do enjoy the fishing I'll pick up a good 8 wt large arbor reel later on.

DrFAS - I'm familiar with Indian River Inlet, have fished there before and often ride my bicycle up there from Bethany. I will try fishing the area around the bridge as you suggested with streamers unless there is still construction work going on.

I will be back in Delaware in October for the early muzzleloader deer season and hope to do more fishing then. We only hunt a few hours in the morning and then a few more hours before dark so I'll have plenty of time in between for fishing which sounds as though it may be better then.
