Are you wading on big slippy oversized boulders and sometimes walking uphill for a mile or are you on the deck of a boat?

I would still be tired and hungrey on the deck of a boat too!

Both. When I'm trout fishing at home, or when I lived there, or on my boat I just tend to not eat. I probably would if I would think to bring something but normally I don't bring anything. One time out west we were on a float trip with a buddy and we brought chicken fingers, chips and beer. One time in West Virginia my friend and I sat and ate sheets hoagies while waiting for the sulphur hatch, that was nice. And if my wife or mother in law are on the boat with me they make tuna wraps. Tortilla shell with tuna and other mixings inside. Those are a perfect snack to answer your original question. But when I'm alone and unprovoked I don't think to eat. Like I said Red Man in the cheek.

I laughed when I read your post. Hiking through treacherous terrain..... or walking around a boat. Climbing boulders and crossing hazardous rivers..... or walking around a boat. 😊 It aint always that easy. Especially when on a charter. 😊
