Live2fish, I think that if you want to post a link like that, you've got to face the facts and use the special reply page. Is it possible to add the buttons for links and images on the quick reply aat the bottom?

Also, I've posted this before, but I like to use tinyurl.

All you do is give it a long web address, and it will reduce it to a small link that you can post without messing up the page. Here's a link to this thread as an example:

It's good practice to warn people where the tinyurl link goes just so they know what they're clicking on.
