

Subject: : Beginner Forum

Topic: : Limestone Stream....

Re: Limestone Stream....

Author: : jayL

Date: : 2010/8/18 17:49:18

URL:

Freestone rivers are primarily sourced by runoff, whereas limestone are sourced mainly by ground water. For this reason, limestoneers have a natural pollution buffer, as well as more consistent temperatures. They also tend to be more fertile, since the ph is naturally regulated by the limestone and other nutrients dissolved in them.

Freestone streams do take on spring seeps usually, but the bulk of their flow is from rain.