
Subject: : Gear Talk

Topic: : Orvis Waders

Re: Orvis Waders

Author: : bigjohn58

Date: : 2006/11/30 21:07:56

URL:

Maurice...I saw the Chota ones but their cleats are huge and just something about them I didn't like although they look like they would grip onto anything. I don't mind really at all that the Orvis ones are not holding up as long as I keep on getting a free pair everytime. They are the Orvis Clearwater boots and they were roughly $80 I believe so right now I'm up to $240 in 2 years if I would have had to pay for all of them. Oh and I probably won't ever buy a pair of boots without the studs anymore just because I do feel they aid me somewhat and last thing I like to do is take a dunk in the water. The studs help some but not a ton but I guess a little is better then no help at all.

Padraic...I want to get a pair of the LL Bean Aquastealths with the studs for fishing in the winter. I was told by others though they are no way near as good as felts but I know from experience snow + felts = ruined boots so I'm willing to give them a try...now I just have to round up some money quick before the snow comes!