I want to get a pair of the LL Bean Aquastealths with the studs for fishing in the winter. I was told by others though they are no way near as good as felts but I know from experience snow + felts = ruined boots so I'm willing to give them a try...

I have not tried them without the studs. With the studs they are as secure on mossy rocks as anything I have worn.

The LL Beans are good for ankle support and more ski boot like. The Simms are lighter in weight and more hunting boot like. For the amount of walking you do, you may want to look for the Simms.
