

Subject: : Warm Water & Salt Water Fly-Fishing

Topic: : Rigg'in' -- Ideal Smallmouth Set Up

Re: Rigg'in' -- Ideal Smallmouth Set Up

Author: : Padraic

Date: : 2007/9/11 8:53:02

URL:

Paul G & I fished the Connodoguineett during the hex hatch. For that, I usually used a 9' 6wt that I built on a Pac Bay blank. I put a full wells grip and a fighting butt on it. That helped horse in the bigger bass quickly, since I could put a lot of pressure on the fish.

I used a Rio line with a bass taper. The fly was pretty bushy and difficult to cast on anything less. I used a 7' leader. The bass weren't line shy but you did have to cast a good distance.

Sadly, the Connie has crashed along with the rest of the Susquehanna and we haven't had good fishing for years now.

For the Susquehanna, I had the St Croix Legend Ultra that Bob Clouser designed. Along with that, I had Bob Clouser's Rio Line (floating). Anyone who is interested in an 8wt should try that rod. It has an action that is really unique and very easy to cast.