By the way, if any of the Kinneys are still around (Kim, Debbie) they would know where to find pictures and more information. And, Harry Kinney wrote a book on the glory days of Crossfork. On the logging railroads, etc., The hollow at 41°31'3.85"N 77°45'10.89"W was surely rich when I was a kid. I cut the end of my thumb off up there fooling around with some old railroad iron.
