For all you having difficulties with SMB I would recommend going to a outbound line with streamers, that always produces, provided your casting in a likly area, structure, shaded bank, big rocks, and bridge structure.. Using a floating line with clousers, unless the water is shallow and you know the fish are there, dosen't work for me. The streamers have to get down. The other sure fire method is dead drifting a crayfish under and indicator. If you do that the rig has to be set-up properly, weight and depth of indicator above split shot. Bob Clousers book would also help. Top water is fun for SMB provided they are being cooprative. Fishing SMB on the top is always harder to keep them on.
