flybinder - I don't camp myownself, except the several times I take a float down the Deschutes. The party usually consists of 4-8 ffishers, and there is always an extra boat to take the camp down to the next site and set up a sit-down dinner (steak, etc.). And last time I went, they had one of those solar showers, which is a good thang to get the desert dust off after a tough 12 hrs of ffishing.

Dunno why they would do this on the Bitterroot - you're never that far from the road and civilization.
