

Subject: : Conservation

Topic: : Big Spring Habitat Work

Re: Big Spring Habitat Work

Author: : afishinado

Date: : 2010/9/10 10:02:20

URL:

As Maurice says... "just sayin" but would it be something if the FBC decided to make Big Spring a brookie fishery? It would be the only major limestone brookie fishing in the State (entire East? Entire nation? Entire planet?), rather than just having brook trout relegated to the headwaters of infertile streams or minor tributaries of a larger stream.

They could electro shock the stream and remove all the wild rainbows they capture and plant them in a stream like the YB? Also, maybe allow harvest of rainbows only by anglers. Every year the stream could be shocked to track the progress of the brookies and mop up the remaining bow population.

I realize not all the bows would be removed, but the vast majority would be relocated (or fried up in a pan) and we can see what a fertile stream with a healthy and large population of brookies is like. Again, just sayin'.

Attach file:

 BS Brookie.jpg (6.74 KB)

