Becker,

Life is short. If you are interested in something, don't waste time thinking about doing it. Give it a shot.

I am sure someone on this board could give you a quick demonstration. You could have a cheap vise from cabelas, as well as most of the necessary tools for like $40. You could tie all of your steelhead flies for absolute minimal materials investment, and many of the same patterns are deadly on stocked trout.

I still use my cabelas vise, and cannot justify an upgrade as of yet.

O, I have plans to start tieing. Heritage informed me he has a vice for me and I just have to wait till the end of the month for a little extra dough, so i can head down to TCO to get set up. I already plan to attend the seminars the TU puts on up here in the valley over the dead of winter to tie. I just can not get in on the steelhead swap, thats all I was saying.
