Do you consider it ethical to advertise small streams?

By "small stream", I am talking about small, relatively unknown wild trout streams (20 ft wide or less). These are usually less trafficked. Particular focus should be placed on streams near populated areas, as that's what I'm picturing when I ask this question.

In your opinion, is it "right" to advertise or broadcast these locations, or should they only be discussed in more private venues (in person, PM, etc)?

Edit: sorry to the first voter. I mixed my "yes and no" up. If your vote should be changed, please weigh in.

If your answer is dependent on something like whether the stream is on private land, please weigh in on that as well.
