

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : Do you consider it ethical to advertise small streams?

Re: Do you consider it ethical to advertise small streams?

Author: : surveyor06

Date: : 2010/9/23 19:55:15

URL:

I voted no, its not alright. I make few posts and the ones I do are on well know streams, no secrets to be kept. Sometimes loose lips sinks ships. If giving a glowing report makes 100 people want to seek out this stream and potentially ruin it I find it wrong. I like to give reports, cause I know when I was learning those reports helped me out. But I would not do so if I believed that report would hurt a gem of a stream. Lets face it, not everyone has good intentions when they go fishing. A few guys keeping their legal share on a small stream could really hurt it. What does that report accomplish, you may have ruined a stream that took alot of leg work for you to find. I have fished alot of the Class A trout streams in Berks County. Some are amazing, some not, but I have invested alot of time seeking out the good ones, and Im not about to let someone ruin that for me.

That being said, Im not going to tear someone a new one for reporting on a stream that I wouldnt. To each his own. Trying to change someones minds of the net it pretty hard. Just my 2 cents

Andy