

---

Subject: : Warm Water & Salt Water Fly-Fishing

Topic: : Warm Stillwater Fishing

Re: Warm Stillwater Fishing

Author: : ginkyhackle

Date: : 2007/9/24 21:54:20

URL:

So, this year nymphing has hooked me a very large number of large and small mouth. Some of these fish have been big. Unfortunately the ones in the 3 pound range have tended to throw my size 14 nymphs close to the bank. I think this comes from my somewhat timid hook setting and the small size of the nymph.

I've noticed that some very plump dragonfly nymphs populate the lakes I fish. I'm going to seriously devote myself to imitating them in a size 8-10 nymph. I really don't like the dragonfly nymphs imitations I've seen on the web or in magazines. Has anyone experimented with a dragonfly pattern?

Incidentally, smaller 7-10" trout seem to love green caddis larvae. I've hooked a zillion like the one below on a green caddis I tie with bright green body glass and peacock herl.

Attach file:

---

 lmouth.jpg (82.62 KB)

