

Subject: : Swap Forum

Topic: : WTB Greys Streamflex 10' 4wt

Re: WTB Greys Streamflex 10' 4wt

Author: : jdaddy

Date: : 2010/9/29 17:52:38

URL:

Quote:

Jdaddy that would make sense that it has trouble with dry flies. My understanding of the Winston 10'-0 4 wt it was to be a check nymph rod. I would be interested in trying that rod some day if you are thinking of parting with it. Maybe Stockoberfest?

I think 95% of people would agree the Streamflex is a better Euro nymphing rod as well. You need a certain amount of give in a Euro rod, thus the reason most use 3 and 4 wt 10' rods. The Winston is a solid 5.5-6 wt rod IMO. It is pretty much universally agreed that Winston failed with this rod. It was greatly anticipated, so that is part of the let down among Winston lovers. Go to the Winston website, they have a decent forum there. It is discussed.

You are welcome to try it. I don't see selling it anytime, as I find it useful in other arenas. Actually, I find it to be a decent Euro and indi nymphing rod, just stiff than I thought it would be. I liked the Streamflex because it was an excellent nymph rod and a decent dry rod.