

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : What Constitues A Catch

Re: What Constitues A Catch

Author: : Stone_Fly

Date: : 2006/12/4 11:25:12

URL:

Last time I had an acurate count was about a month ago, I caught 1 fish. It's not uncommon though to have a 100 fish day, and unless I write each fish down in a journal that "count" becomes meaningless.

On the other hand if you are not keeping a journal then the only reason you are counting is to keep score, in other words it's competition. Fly-fishing isn't a competition, it is a recreational sport. If it were a competiition you'd have to just declare me the winner, cause if I keep count accurately, at the end of the day I'd have the most fish.

As it is, I'm only interested in how many legal sized brookies I catch and their weight and length. I really do need to keep a journal though, I'm losing my memory if not my mind. 🙄