It started a long time ago. TU was formed in 1959 and has been working on this stuff ever since. And there were people working on these things even long before TU was formed.

i think you need to read my posts more carefully. i am a member and i do join in. in fact i have 5 restoration projects going on right now.

the problem is none of the streams being worked on are at present wild trout streams. we have very few wild trout streams in this area of pa. they are in danger and i have brought this up countless times. tu has ignored my plea due to the overwhelming demand of "other" fisheries. so....now a few of us are trying to get things rolling on other projects.

dont think i dont know tu's history or the great work they have done. but we must not get complacent. some of our best and most valuable natural resources in amish land are endangered.
