

---

Subject: : Beginner Forum

Topic: : Strike Indicator

Re: Strike Indicator

Author: : wetnet

Date: : 2010/10/14 21:40:25

URL:

Quote:

ant wrote:

You can if you don't mind people laughing at you. :) I use thingamabobbers to float nymphs and the end of my line as an indicator any other time.

I'm sure there isn't a pic on the smiley face list to express my reaction to this comment.

This is a beginner forum so with that I think you need to not worry about what people think, but it would be good to think about what the thingamaboobers do. They float a nymph. Anyway you can reproduce that action is good..no matter how much anyone laughs at what you use to do it.

As far as "You can as long as.." I do believe most of the United States Fly Fishing team members make their own versions of nymph floating thingamaoobers. One is a Dry dropper, another is a curly indicator with floatant added. Believe me there are more and they do create their own.

If we were not inventive and some being not afraid of laughter, nothing would have ever been invented. So my advice to you is try out everything and let them laugh.

With that does anyone have some idea for a device to squish the water out of tuna in a can, without getting your hands all smelly...you'd be famous. 🍴