It was a pleasure. The fish seem to be pretty well upstream, but in smaller numbers than we would have liked. I think it is still a bit early in the season and think that maybe the runs that have come in have spread well upstream, but there are more fish that have yet to come in to the streams. I think it is safe to admit we were on Elk as it flows under Rte 20 and spent most of our time a good distance downstream from there.

The water was not high, but it was moving pretty well, allowing good drifts. As Alby mentioned, the murk dissipated as the day wore on.

I have video too, but I need to get it up on youtube to share it. Will post when I get that together.
