But BJ even came back online and said that he had issues after being missing a month and stating that he would mail them out. Now he has not been online since the beginning of September, I don't get it.

Even though I got burnt I probably would consider doing another swap.

I have to agree with gentleshepherd. I think we have all been involved with some project that does not work as planned but he did say he would send them out.

I'm not mad, I did this to see what others tie and use. I will do other swaps again too.

We all have problems, some bigger than others.

I just hope all is well with BJ.
