Mine was to always carry something to remove the hook from the fish , yeah you can pinch a hook out with your fingers but , not only does that ruin the fly (waterlogged) even with the barb pinched down , but it also overstresses the fish if you intend to release them , carry a pair of forceps or small needle nose pliers , you can remove the hook from a fish with the right tool without even having to remove it from the water , much easier on the fish and the fly.
