Tim,

The Susquehanna has been hit with something! When I go downstream of Harrisburg, I come back sick to my stomach and sometimes I start to cry..... like the dumb crying Indian so many years ago! in a water pollution commercial.

I have only caught fish way upstream of Harrisburg!! The further upstream the better! Northbranch, maybe Erie "go north young man"

Chubs are something to catch. When I go fishing, I like to catch something. If chubs are there, and will hit a fly, that's what I go after.

Smallmouth are nice, but if pollution has killed them, then anything that can survive the polluted water is what I fish for.

Panfish, sunfish, were in abundance in the river years ago. Now almost gone..... if they were there, I'd flyfish for sunfish. Size 12 dries with a 3wt, now that would be Heaven! but you have to take what is available.....

chubs will soon be called "warmwater grayling" and carp "warmwater bonefish"

scuze me while I tie a fly
