JackM=The M=Mick? The automation you posted of the Marcellus site is almost identical to the one on RT30 near Roxbury in Somerset county , i had to laugh at how much it looks like what you posted. Those square/rectangle metal boxes (they lind of look like dumpster containers) are where they store alot of the fracking fluids , on this site where we watch and talk to the crews almost daily the number of boxes is different so they are constantly moving them around from site to site and some of the concoctions get prepared at Haliburtons shop in Indiana PA , this info came from having breakfast with the crews and BS'ing with them. Everybody will take the time to talk with the one legged guy.
