Here is three of us in a row that promote the idea of a stiff fine for the infraction in Lycoming couty , an accident like that is just stupid and should be treated as such. Here is THE opportunity for the enforcement folks to show how WE THE PEOPLE feel about stupid mistakes that endanger OUR wildlife. I don't want to say , make an example out of them 'cause that implies in a way that yeah they will fine that company while 10 other ones get away with it NO!!!! if someone does it tomorrow the same set of rules apply , zero tolerance on infractions , I also support the idea of a tax on the companies to be used for beefing up the inspection , TU article in TROUT magazine says we are severely undermanned on the inspection end. Interesting to see how this shakes out.
