Sorry to hear that the LLFS is closing. I have one of his rods and I really like it.

I started fly fishing there and was lucky enough to meet and learn for Al Miller and some of the other regulars there. I know that Rod had his moments but that was Rod. I saw him give things to people that were worth a lot of money. I will miss him and the shop.

Like Gary said its location was its draw and curse. If you could open a shop in the barn, that would have been better than the spring house.

I wish Rod the best in what ever he does.
