

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : LLH fly shop

Re: LLH fly shop

Author: : afishinado

Date: : 2010/11/29 10:08:49

URL:

Quote:

trowpa wrote:

sorry - i don't buy the cabelas thing. Nor do i buy the "LV is too developed for a fly shop"

Cabelas is at least good 35 minutes from the lehigh valley depending on where you are talking (allentown, bethlehem, or easton areas). And frankly - cabelas isn't so hot..not local...and is not a pleasant experience.

NYC has plenty of fly shops..i don't see what development has to do with it. NYC is a good 2 hours away from any decent streams. Lehigh valley has the LLH, Monacacy, Bushkill, Cedar, etc...

Plenty of customers. Plenty of local streams. Problem is simply that no one has provided a true FLY shop with decent inventory.

I like the TCO idea...

I don't think it's really a location thing. I think the reason most FFing shops are closing is because many guys buy their tippet and split shot at the local fly shop and buy the bulk of their high dollar equipment on-line or at big box stores to save money, or time, or to have a larger selection. No right or wrong I guess....just reality.