

Subject: : Warm Water & Salt Water Fly-Fishing

Topic: : New Sage BASS RODS !!!!!!!

Re: New Sage BASS RODS !!!!!!!

Author: : TimB

Date: : 2007/10/14 11:12:37

URL:

Thanks for the tip. I haven't purchased from them before. I'll take a look. Its getting to be that time of year when I start looking at what I want to build this winter. I usually build one or two rods when the weather turns cold. I was thinking about an 8 wt. travel rod, just because. I haven't fished anything that heavy in nearly 10 years, but I'm running out of project excuses and my heaviest rod (a 9' 7wt factory built model) broke this summer for the second time.

I could send it back for a replacement, but that's the fourth time I've had one of the brand's rods break while fishing. They're a reputable company, but I'm beginning to think its karma with me and their rods. It's time to look at another brand. At least that's my excuse for building another rod I don't really need 😊

I still have a couple of other rods I haven't even fished yet...

If this Sage blank becomes available that could be fun - as long as they'd sell the matching line to go with it.