I'm with flybinder...I've not had a bad experience with cabelas when something wasn't quite right. I have also had things break and replced them with exactly the same thing and never had a problem again. I have also made my own repairs to save time and money...so you have options. If I were to have them replace the rod and they offered to give me a new reel and line and backing and everything again..I wouldn't argue. You jut extended the life of your fly line by "several months"
