Heritage-Angler...has offered his "guidance" to any Jam attendees who want to make the trip (less than an hour) up to the northern tier streams. I'll not steal his thunder or commit him to something, just saying that a day-trip north is very doable. I believe a small group shot up that way last year from our prior location.

This is a fact. I'll be up there the week before the Jam, and I'll be commuting to the Jam from Quiet Oaks. I should have a good idea of what the fishing conditions are like, and pass that info on to our crew Friday night. I'll also gladly act as guide for anyone that wants to check out the North Central area streams.

Everything depends on the hatches and water levels. It may be great fishing up North, and it just might stink. The important thing is that we have options. We get the best of both worlds, so to speak. Anyone that has any questions about the Northern tier can feel free to ask me anything, either here or via PM.

As far as a North Central Mini-Jam goes, we also have another option open. I'll be attending another gathering the week after the PAFF Jam. This event will be held on Pine Creek, and based in Waterville. We can easily piggy back a PAFF Mini-Jam on to that event for those that have interest - just let me know.

I'd like to thank the moderators for their work in setting up this event - you guys really did your homework. My sole concern was that we had a place to hold our Jamboree - I'd show up wherever it is. These events are all about the people here, IMHO. As the number of people that attend this event grows, it's important that the planning keeps pace, and it has.

Hoping the 2011 Jamboree is the best one yet!
