I have been fishing the Delaware for over 35 years. I have found stripers in all the large pools from the Red Barn up to the Junction and even an occasional one in the West Branch. They are the scourge of the river since they prey on trout like lions on zebras.

They are mostly caught at night on very large flies of any description. If you catch one by all means kill it. They are quite good to eat.

Remember those Bass are native to the river and belong there unlike the trout they feast on 😁
