Always keep a couple of band-aids in your vest and a first aid kit in the car. Patch yourself up and keep fishing!

Another good use for band-aids is to prevent cracking of cuticles in the winter. Before heading to the stream, put a band-aid on a finger that you know will crack and bleed with exposure.

Keep your cell phone in a zip lock baggie. It's not water proof, but it will protect it if you take a swim and get out of the water quickly. Saved me more than once. Cell phones have a little sticker on the battery or inside them that turns from white to red if exposed to water. They will know if you got it wet, you can't lie about it.
