Yeah, "perfect all-around rod" is an incredible stretch.

It's a very specialized rod. I have the 10' 4wt, and like it for nymphing. It can do dry fly duty if necessary, but it ain't pretty.

It's pretty hard to be accurate with a 10' rod on dries, but it can be used quite well (the last four hours were tossing all's rats to risers via a 10' 3wt streamflex, as a matter of fact).

Having both ends of the 3wt spectrum, I'd much rather have had an 8' or 8'6" today instead of the 10' when they started coming up. I still preferred the 10'r to my 6'6"r for today, because I had no intention of standing in a stream.

Really, really regretted not putting the 8' 4wt in the trucklet,

^ that's the latest I have ever thrown the tl;dr flag. So close, yet so far. 😊
