I also agree with Midnight regarding choosing the prime stretches of stream to fish and choosing the optimum time to be on the water given the conditions. Have you ever been on a stretch of class A water and knew there was fish there but couldnt buy a take with a hundred dollar bill? Competition rules are just a way of making flyfisherman figure out how to catch fish despite the conditions and river type. Remember the fish are there, you just need to elevate your game to get them to bite. When I go fishing now i dont always run right to the sweet honey hole. I love to relax and fish the water that most people would just walk by.
