I have the new Sage Click series on my streamflex rods. They are one of the lightest reels made. Its personal preference, some people like the heavier reels to balance the rod but what you will find is the longer the rod the heavier reel you need. If you are throwing an 11 foot rod all day i would go as light as you can. http://www.sageflyfish.com/dyn\_prodlist.php?k=132673

Here's where the competition mindset differs from the casual mindset, imo. 😊

I really just can't enjoy fishing a rod that is too tip heavy. It might be the best tool for super hard fishing, but the way I usually fish, that's not too much of a problem. I fish a lot, and I fish long days, but I take plenty of breaks, and am not worried about weight as much. I basically fart around for a sizable percentage of the day when I go fishing. I'll take the heavier reel in exchange for better feel in hand.
