I understand that, and you'll recall that I argued against using it as an "all around" rod in another thread.

He's not the only one that ignored this...

Actually, I still say to hell with your Warsaw Pact nymphing, but I can confirm this thing is pretty sweet to indicator nymph or swing wets with. 10' rods make mending stupid, but whether its the line weight, my line and leader choices, or just the way its built its just not fun to cast, and the length and weight make it tough to have any decent accuracy and precision.
