

Subject: : Tips and Tricks

Topic: : safety: fishing rough, remote topography

Re: safety: fishing rough, remote topography

Author: : dkile

Date: : 2011/2/2 22:55:26

URL:

Good conversation and has me rethinking all the crap I haul around with me. Actually been doing pretty well trimming the junk back lately in my chest pack.

Good planning comes to mind for safety if your running around in some of the backwoods fishing. I didn't see the movie first discussed, but followed the story when it broke a few years ago and the one thing still stands out from letting a big rock fall on you and then having to hack your arm off...tell someone where you are going and when you will be back. Could be worth an arm to you. Just saying.

After that a plastic whistle, space blanket, small knife, a few matches, energy bar and some water would see most anyone through one cold wet night. Most people get in real serious trouble not from lack of food, water or big rocks dropping on them, but hypothermia.

That being said when I am fishing in the future I might fish close to JackM and his flask that way when I do have an arm needing hacked off it won't feel quit as painful.