

Subject: : Conservation

Topic: : Lehigh River Dam Study

Re: Lehigh River Dam Study

Author: : gfen

Date: : 2011/2/7 10:56:00

URL:

Quote:

LRSABecker wrote:

That fish ladder was not the correct type for shad I guess. That and it is a complete mess that no one takes care of. I am not quite in the loop for the exact reasoning for the ladders on those dams. Whole reason i was there was to show my clubs support to further study the removal of the dams by the Wildlands and PFBC.

So, you were trying to scam chicks then?

Probably not the right place for that.

I saw the fish ladder once. It seemed kinda silly, nor did I see any fish. Then again, when I went it was very cold and we were skipping highschool, which we did alot. That means it had to be at least 18 years ago.

I should go again. When its warm. You can't fish at the ladder, though. I've never fished down there at all. Maybe this year I'll look at it.

Now, I freely admit 100% total ignorance, but if you pull the dams, the water level goes down, obviously. How far up does the water level drop actually go? Someone weigh in on this, I'm fascinated to know.