

Subject: : Conservation

Topic: : Lehigh River Dam Study

Re: Lehigh River Dam Study

Author: : SBecker

Date: : 2011/2/7 20:37:41

URL:

Quote:

jayL wrote:

<http://www.flyguysoutfitting.com/skemie.html>

Skilmanian is a regular PAFF poster that seems to build a lot of rods. 😞

Anyway, my opinion is that steelhead = terrible idea and atlantics = intriguing but skeptical.

Good work on the dam removal stuff.

Hey, we aren't just a bunch of hilljack truck chasing metal stringer fools. Well at least most of us are not.

I understand why you think Steel are a bad idea, at least I think I do...Is it because of the Upper Delaware? I understand all the skepticism, as I am one of them as well. When I was talking to a certain gentleman and he explained to me that the Dr. in NY was already licking his lips at what could be done to the Lehigh if the dams would disappear I started to become a little bit of a believer. The thought of Shad, Steel, Atlantic's and the normal trout population all adds up to an unbelievable fisherie. The Dr. also mentioned that he would be able to breed the fish to return in different times of the year, so it would be a year long fisheries. I dunno, like I said I am just a messenger and will be talking to the Dr. himself on a scheduled early spring steel trip in NY.