Anybody use them for warmwater / coldwater fish? In the Susquehanna, many times I've fished in a jet and a prop boat..... great for spin or casting, but terrible for a fly rod!

I'm thinking a float tube would be "Nirvana" with a fly rod. Especially with two or more longrodders! A car could be left at the takeout while another car could go upstream a couple miles to start the wonderful long rod journey.

Also lakes, Pinchoh or Opossum, would be nice to fish from a float tube.

I like to fish slow with a flyrod. I'm thinking the slow downstream drift and stopping where you want would be wonderful with a float tube.

I've never got a thrill out of tossing a big heavy tube or spinnerbait with heavy tackle and heavy line while sitting in a bass boat. LOL

What do you guys think? Anybody float tube?

PS - "Sicko" is now available on a DVD! Maybe the best movie I ever saw..... great insight on what's going on!
