

Subject: : Beginner Forum

Topic: : Any interest in a Newbie Mini-Jam?

Re: Any interest in a Newbie Mini-Jam?

Author: : jdaddy

Date: : 2011/3/2 15:03:10

URL:

Quote:

Heritage-Angler wrote:

Quote:

troutwilleatflies wrote:

You mean to say our WCO was actually patrolling the Heritage, all the times I have walked my Boxer along there I have never seen him, or a deputy. It's good they, the parks dept, are leaving the banks get wild and bushy, now if they let the fallen trees and brush piles gather we may have something. Did he say anything about trucking in some boulders to create some broken water in the flat areas? LOL

Our WCO, Lee Creyer wants to see exactly that. And more. 😊

Being the pessimist that I typically am . . . how is the riparian buffer going to be improved in that area? You can't make it wider on the walking path side and that is primarily trees anyway. Likewise the other side of the stream is mostly forested in that section. How do they plan on getting this improved riparian buffer?

Why is it THAT section of that stream that they are concerned with when there are miles and miles where they literally cut the grass to the streams banks?

I mean frankly, I really don't care about wading that section. Actually don't really care about that section at all (from a fishing perspective). But it really seems like that was a politically correct answer imo.