

Subject: : Beginner Forum

Topic: : Would it be a waste of time?

Re: Would it be a waste of time?

Author: : DGC

Date: : 2011/3/5 8:27:50

URL:

In addition to what has been said:

A compensation strategy could be to go with a shorter rod, say about 7 feet, because these can be handled quite well with wrist and elbow action, and very little shoulder, so that your gripping hand will rarely ever need to go up higher than your shoulder (for your left hand).

I often opt for the shorter rod even though a longer one is a better tool for some streams simply for the comfort and absence of fatigue that "wristing" my casts provides.

Good luck.