I prefer mustad hooks but it seems to me that there is no "setting" the hook as with bass or pike. They hook themselves and there doesn't seem to be much I can do about it. I've had hooks bend and break(cheap or wore out), and fish come off when I almost had em. Then again, I've caught some hanging by the merest sliver of tissue. It depends on how they take it, I just pull slack up when they hit. Sometimes fast, sometimes slow. Quickness can be bad at times and I never set hard, They hook themselves. I believe its more a matter of timing.
