

Subject: : Beginner Forum

Topic: : wooly buggers...am I doin' it right?

Re: wooly buggers...am I doin' it right?

Author: : JakesLeakyWaders

Date: : 2011/3/21 12:58:14

URL:

The above post pretty much sums it up as a general guide, and you never know when a trout is going to strike a bugger.

My favorite is when you can see the bugger below the surface and a trout swims up fast from the depths and nails it near the surface.

Sometimes they miss, but don't get too excited and jerk it away if they miss. They sometimes swim around all crazy after a missed strike like they're spooked, but they are really searching for their escaped meal so keep it right where it was.

Edit: Who is James ???

